COMPETITION RESULTS

The winner's prize: a one-year course at KLC Interior Design Training School worth £9870

Margaret Irving Miller's basement pantry, London

In the February issue of The World of Interiors you were invited to enter a decorating competition by sending in photographs of a room you had recently decorated, or of one you set up specially. An astounding 400 of you responded worldwide – from Brazil, Peru, Japan, Hong Kong, Singapore, to India, Saudi Arabia, the Americas and Iceland, mentioning a few, and of course every European country too – 35 in all.

I would like to thank every entrant and to congratulate you all on the high standards achieved. I was amazed by the variety and ingenuity of the designs and pouring over them was a long, long, but heartening task.

Getting down to the 40 best was relatively straightforward; but choosing the seven finalists from them, and lastly finding an outright winner took days of agonising thought.

Anna Wasserthal's tin hut, nr Pretoria, South Africa

The winner

Blot Kerr-Wilson from London, for her beautifully shell-encrusted grotto bathroom which will feature, in all its glory, in the August issue of The World of Interiors.

The runners-up are:

Jutta Christ from Rio de Janeiro, for her painted and furnished roof-terrace.

Robert Du-Noyer from London, for his white-stained oriental shelved thinking-space for a monk.

Margaret Irving Miller from London, for her temporary yellow-washed brick pantry in a basement.

Barbara Pershyn from America, for her countrified plain and painted woody sitting room.

Richard Rigby from Australia, for his cool, Italianate lime-washed entrance hall.

Anna Wasserthal from South Africa, for her delightfully simple temporary decor in a corrugated metal hut.
